Spice is right in Mowgli meals

Every day is a school day with Nisha Katona, who is animatedly talking about the reasons why vegetable-focused dishes are so prominent in Indian cookery.

BY KATIE WRIGHT

For Hindus, it dates back to tribal wars thousands of years ago, she says.

"They thought, 'We need to find peaceful ways of conflict resolution, and meat gets your blood up, it's passion-inducing and hard to digest'. So they banned meat," says the Ormskirk-born chef and Mowgli Street Food founder.

"Meat is something that is associated with brutality, and muscle flexing, and none of these are things that are respected within Hinduism."

For other religious groups, vegetarianism was adopted because any life – whether human or animal – was seen as sacred.

Barely pausing for breath, she goes on to explain how widows were instrumental in the evolution of vegetarianism because men were traditionally barred from the kitchen.

"You're left with this absolutely trailblazing band of people who were allowed in the kitchen, and that was widows," she says.

Forbidden from eating meat because "all of that passion-giving, heat-giving food was forbidden – their life was seen as over when their husbands died", these women "found really clever ways of creating flavour with very natural ingredients using just vegetables".

Katona – the daughter of a Hindu Brahmin priest – who has just released her latest cookbook, Meat Free Mowgli, is something of a trailblazer herself.

Giving up "earning good money, and a great life" working as a child protection barrister for two decades to pursue her dream of bringing authentic Indian to the British foodie scene, she opened the first Mowgli Street Food restaurant in Liverpool in 2014.

Five cookbooks and 15 restaurants later (with another six in the works), the 51-year-old is a judge on BBC2's Great British Menu, a regular on This

The affordability of Indian street food is prevalent in her latest cookbook.

"When you're cooking with vegetables, with pulses, you're talking about 50p per head," says the chef. "And I'm talking about generous portions."

Her cheap eats will never compromise on taste, however. "I want everything to be really, like, a million flavours delicious. You can do that without meat, believe it or not, just by getting clever with a couple of other ingredients like spice."

Packed with fragrant curries, tangy pickles, creamy dals and veggie twists on Mowgli menu favourites such as sticky paneer fingers (instead of chicken wings), the book is intended to school home cooks on the basics so they can go forth and come up with their own flavoursome combinations.

MOWGLI STICKY FINGERS

(SERVES 3-4)

INGREDIENTS

- 2 tbsp date syrup
- 1 tbsp black treacle/molasses
- 3 garlic cloves, finely chopped
- 5cm piece of fresh ginger, peeled and finely chopped
- 1 green chilli, finely chopped
- 1 tsp garam masala
- 2 tsp ground cumin
- ½ tsp black mustard seeds
- 4 tsp dark rum
- Juice of 1 lime
- 2 tbsp white wine vinegar
- 1 tsp salt
- 1 x 226g pack of paneer, cut into fingers
- 2 tbsp vegetable oil
- Fresh herbs, to garnish (optional)

METHOD

1. Add all the ingredients, except the paneer, oil and herbs, to a saucepan, stir to combine and set over a medium heat. Bring to the boil, then remove from the heat and allow to cool.

2. Add the paneer fingers to the cooled marinade, mix until well coated and leave for 10 minutes to marinate.

3. Meanwhile, heat the oil in a large non-stick frying pan/skillet over a medium heat. When hot, add the marinated paneer fingers and cook until caramelised all over, drizzling over a little of the marinade if the pan is looking dry.

4. Serve immediately, garnished with fresh herbs, if you want.

PANEER, CASHEW AND MANGO CURRY

INGREDIENTS

- 2 tbsp vegetable oil
- ½ tsp black mustard seeds
- 1 red onion, roughly chopped
- 2.5cm piece of fresh ginger, peeled and finely chopped
- 2 garlic cloves, finely chopped or crushed
- 1 green chilli, finely chopped
- 2 tbsp garam masala
- 1 tsp ground coriander
- 1 tsp ground cumin
- ½ tsp ground turmeric
- ¼ tsp chilli powder
- 1 tsp salt
- 1 tsp sugar
- 225g paneer, chopped into small chunks
- ½ large mango, flesh diced into 1cm pieces
- 50g cashew nuts
- 50g coconut cream
- 100ml water, or as needed
- Lemon juice, to taste
- Handful of fresh coriander, roughly chopped

METHOD

1. Heat the oil in a large non-stick pan that has a lid over a medium heat. When hot, add the mustard seeds and let sizzle, then add the onion and cook for 5-6 minutes, or until starting to soften.

2. Add the chopped ginger, garlic and green chilli, cook for 2-3 minutes, then add the ground spices, chilli powder, salt and sugar.

3. Add the paneer and cook for 3-4 minutes, or until starting to colour all over, then add the diced mango, cashews, coconut cream and measured water. Cover with the pan lid and simmer for 6-8 minutes, or until the paneer is cooked through, adding a splash more water if needed.

4. Season with lemon juice and garnish with the chopped coriander before serving.

Drinks

WHAT CBD DRINKS ARE AND HOW THEY CAN HELP YOU THROUGH DRY JANUARY

The sober curious movement has been growing over the past few years, meaning more people are keen to give Dry January a go. But if you enjoy a boozy drink to help you relax, what can you do if soft drinks don't quite seem to cut it? CBD drinks could make going sober that bit easier – here's everything you need to know...

WHAT ARE CBD DRINKS?

"CBD is a non-psychoactive compound that originates in the hemp plant, and preclinical evidence suggests it can have a positive effect on stress and anxiety, by promoting relaxation," says Eoin Keenan, founder of CBD drinks brand Goodrays. CBD doesn't get you "high" like marijuana, and has been approved for consumer use in the UK. Predominantly available in drinks and oils, it's often used to help with anxiety and pain.

WHAT ARE THE POTENTIAL BENEFITS OF CBD DRINKS?

According to Ahmed Mir, founder of Nature and Bloom and an expert on medical marijuana: "CBD can have a similar effect to alcohol without the intoxication or hangover, so it can make a great alternative to get you through Dry January."
Most drinks on the market offer between 10mg-30mg of CBD per can with the UK Food Standards Agency recommending you consume no more than 70mg of CBD a day.

3 CBD DRINKS TO TRY

- Parachute Apple & Ginger CBD Infused Drink 250ml Can, £33 for 12. One of the tastiest options on the market. With the addition of green tea and 10mg of CBD per can, it's a refreshing, relaxing beverage that can be enjoyed at any time of day.
- Goodrays Raspberry & Guava Natural 30MG CBD Drinks, £17.95 for 6. A sweet and fruity affair, this option has slightly more CBD in it. It's a calming and tasty beverage.
- Trip Elderflower Mint CBD Drink, £14 for 6. Trip is one of the most well-known CBD drink brands out there. With aesthetically pleasing cans and a subtle, sparkling drink, this flavour is a real crowd-pleaser and is a great one to try as the days get lighter.

PIONEER: Bill Haley at the New Victoria Theatre in London in 1976.

Hail to the first king of rock and roll

Considered by many to be the father of rock and roll thanks to his 1954 hit Rock Around The Clock, Bill Haley helped inspire a generation of artists – Elvis Presley, The Beatles and later David Gilmour of Pink Floyd, to name just a few.

BY ALEX GREEN

But according to his son, the singer and guitarist, who died in 1981 aged 55 after a long battle with alcoholism, has not received the recognition he deserves.

"My father was a very important figure who was overlooked, particularly here in the US," says Bill Haley Jr over a video call from Pennsylvania.

"He is much more appreciated in the UK, in Europe and Germany in particular, but here in the US he was dismissed by a lot of the music critics.

"When the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame started, the first year he was not even included in the first class of inductees."

Bill Jr has written a book about his father, titled Crazy Man, Crazy after one of his best-known songs.

He also performs a "rock and roll history show" with his own band, sharing the stories behind those classic tracks. And despite a difficult relationship with his father – who left the family in 1962 when his son was just six – Bill Jr feels a responsibility to educate others about his legacy.

"From conversations with him at the end of his life and also the quotes I have read, he was troubled a little bit," he says.

"He was disappointed he didn't receive more recognition for the hard work he put in. He was dismissed as a one-hit wonder, as an insignificant figure, and was really eclipsed by Elvis Presley."

With his trademark kiss-curl hairstyle, sharp suits and energetic stage presence, Haley helped launch the genre that would take over the Western world.

The flamboyant showman was married three times and had 10 children.

Born in July 1925 in Highland Park in Michigan, his interest in music began early.

He made his first record in 1948 and worked as a disc jockey while playing in country bands.

But upon hearing the nascent rock and roll genre, he dropped his cowboy image and launched Bill Haley And His Comets in a bid to attract a younger audience.

"This phenomenon that we call rock and roll was really the coming together of two distinctly American forms of music," says his son.

"One was hillbilly and Western music, as they called it back when my father was performing it. We now call it country music. But that was my father's first love.

"And, of course, rhythm and blues, which was called 'race music' back then.

"In a highly segregated society, white individuals weren't really exposed to that kind of music.

"Those two forms were going to collide at some point and certainly they did in a phenomenal way in the 1950s.

"My father's contribution was he recognised very early on – like 1949 or 1950 – that it was a means of becoming popular and selling records.

"He was looking for a way to get kids and teenagers dancing again."

His performance of Rock Around The Clock on the Ed Sullivan Show in August 1955 was a pivotal moment in the country's cultural history.

Haley struggled with his overnight fame and the competition of the acts that followed him, such as Elvis. He descended into

SZNZ: WINTER

Weezer's fourth mini-album is the fun conclusion to the band's SZNZ project.
Inspired by Vivaldi's Four Seasons, the ditsy Californian quartet created each EP in tandem with each season.
This 21-minute offering sits somewhere between indie rock and grunge.
There are interesting hooks and catchy melodies dotted throughout the seven tracks, along with a mish-mash of tunes borrowed from the classical world.
It's an impressively climactic ending to Weezer's clever series.

IGGY POP
EVERY LOSER

After delivering the late career opus that was 2016's Post Pop Depression, Iggy Pop retreated into jazzy disfunction on the "sombre and contemplative" Free.
Four years on, the Godfather of Punk returns to what he knows best, tall tales of excess and melodious hard rock.
Every Loser delivers on both fronts, from the aural assault of opening track Frenzy to the bluesy groove of Modern Day Rip Off and back to basics Neo Punk, an apparent ode to the Ramones.
For this record, Pop recruited a dream team featuring Guns N' Roses' Duff McKagan on bass and Chad Smith from Red Hot Chili Peppers on drums.
They offer the chance for Pop to stretch out and the result is one his most diverse and creative records in recent years, with Comments bordering on the euphoric and The Morning Show delivering a tuneful take on soulful 80s yacht rock.
On The News For Andy he rails against rampant capitalism.
Every Loser sees Pop take on board the lessons learned from his recent releases, synthesising them into a more rounded and, dare I say it, radio-friendly project.

alcoholism which triggered physical and mental problems.

Bill Jr tells how, in August 1977, when Elvis died, his father quickly rang home.

"He wanted to let us know that he was still alive in case we saw the newspaper headlines saying 'The King of Rock and Roll' had died.

"He was the original king of rock and roll, and later he became the father of rock and roll."

RARE AMERICANS
SONGS THAT DON'T BELONG

This album brings together the tracks that failed to make it on to previous releases by Vancouver pop-punks Rare Americans. Their music draws on college rock and hip hop and the result will please fans of Twenty One Pilots.

Tremendous is a quirky hip hop cut that is good fun on first listen, but eventually grows tedious.

Little White Lies features a hooky chorus and playful storytelling, while Bruised is a rollicking take on country, which caps off a mixed bag that will no doubt please their fans.

MIKE
BEWARE OF THE MONKEY

New York rapper Mike may only be 24 but has already released numerous albums and mixtapes. Each has dealt with personal questions, spanning depression, adulthood and the grief of losing his mother.

However, this album is reflective and celebratory.

The record takes its title from the Chinese zodiac, and follows on from Mike's tradition of dropping his albums on the different seasonal solstices.

This marks a new chapter for Mike, one that maintains the same sense of creative intensity while exploring new sounds.

THRILLER/ROMANCE

In snowladen 1830, Captain Hitchcock (Simon McBurney) and senior officers at West Point military academy are alarmed when a cadet is found dead by hanging.

Closer inspection reveals the heart has been torn from the young man's chest.

Widowed detective Augustus Landor (Christian Bale) is enlisted to discreetly unmask the perpetrator without damaging West Point's reputation.

Landor's efforts to unmask a perpetrator are met with fierce resistance from cadets, who abide by a code of silence.

Thankfully, a morbid and poetic trainee called Edgar Allan Poe (Harry Melling) is openly disdainful of military tradition and agrees to work with Landor to crack the case.

The dogged duo contemplate links to witchcraft but another line of inquiry focuses on academy medic Dr Daniel Marquis (Toby Jones), his wife Julia (Gillian Anderson), their sickly daughter Lea (Lucy Boynton) and son Artemus (Harry Lawley).

Based on a book by Louis Bayard, which melds historical fact with outlandish fiction, The Pale Blue Eye is an atmospheric and grim detective thriller that is far more engrossing when we don't have a clue what is going on.

Once writer-director Scott Cooper scoops out the beating heart of the mystery, the emotional payoff is light despite solid performances from a heavyweight cast that includes Timothy Spall, Robert Duvall and Charlotte Gainsbourg.

Misery and suffering leech from every frame as cinematographer Masanobu Takayanagi enhances the wintry setting with a cool colour palette of blues and greys, pierced by flickering golden daggers of candlelight.

BEST FOR SPORTS FANS

FIFA 23

PLATFORM: PC, XBOX X|S, XBOX ONE, PS4, PS5, SWITCH, GOOGLE STADIA; GENRE: SPORTS; PRICE: £59.99; AGE RATING: 3

All good things come to an end, and so it is with the FIFA series as we know it. The superb FIFA 23 will be the last instalment of the partnership between EA and world football's governing body, but what an instalment it is. Women's football is finally represented, albeit partially, in an exciting, enjoyable and overdue evolution of the world's favourite football game. Gameplay, as usual, improves year-on-year. More realistic does mean more difficult, but it's a price worth paying, even if your Burton Albion centre-half can't turn and ping a 60-yard through-ball in one unfeasible pirouette. Set-pieces are improved, if not perfected. EA could have released a howler, or saved their best for next summer's big transfer. Instead, FIFA 23 is a fitting testimonial to an illustrious partnership.
Skip to the end: Classy end to a classic partnership.

BEST FOR A NIGHT IN

LET'S SING 2023

PLATFORM: SWITCH, PLAYSTATION 4/5, XBOX ONE/X/SERIES S; GENRE: MUSIC; PRICE: £44.99; AGE RATING: 12

With songs from Encanto to Ben E King, this game has variety, top-tier graphics, engaging music videos and hours of fun. And if you're playing with adults, it would definitely be enhanced by a glass of wine or two. With some timing issues on the mics, it isn't the most precise gauge of your singing abilities, but it is an absolute hoot, with great tracks from the likes of Pink, Queen and Billie Eilish. However, there are a few too many songs you would hear in a club when there should perhaps be more karaoke classics. A party must-have for lots of family fun – and who knows? Maybe you'll discover the next Beyonce.
Skip to the end: Some songs are more fitting for the club than your front room, but who cares when the karaoke itch is scratched so well.

Trip back in time for murder mystery

BY ALEX GREEN

When three friends reconnect at a high school reunion in the south of France, it's not long before unanswered questions from the past about the disappearance of a high school student come to the fore.

French Riviera-set series The Reunion, which premieres on ITVX on January 12, follows the story of student Vinca Rockwell, played by Ivanna Sakhno, who disappeared 25 years earlier during a snowstorm.

Years later, when her former friends are reunited again, they start to seek answers about Vinca and her mysterious and sudden disappearance.

Adapted from Guillaume Musso's best-selling novel The Reunion, aka La Jeune Fille et la Nuit, the six-part drama stars Ioan Gruffudd as writer Thomas Degalais, who has always carried a torch for Vinca, Gregory Fitoussi as Thomas's best friend from childhood, Maxime Biancardini, with actress Vahina Giocante starring as Fanny Brahimi, who years later still has feelings for Thomas.

Welsh star Gruffudd, 49, had a role in 1997 blockbuster Titanic, before starring in ITV series Hornblower from 1998 to 2003.

His other notable film roles include Black Hawk Down, Horrible Bosses and San Andreas, while his TV credits of late include ITV's Liar, alongside Downton Abbey star Joanne Froggatt and Australian series Harrow.

Director Bill Eagles said of the series: "We're working across two time periods, so we have a double cast. We had to cast our protagonists as 18-year-olds and as 45-year-olds. That's a challenge in itself."

But Eagles, who has also directed shows like Pennyworth, Strike Back and the first series of ITV's The Good Karma Hospital, adds: "Guillaume Musso is Europe's number one thriller writer and The Reunion has an unreliable protagonist, it's a murder-mystery, there are bodies buried from 25 years ago and an increasing number of bodies pop up along the way as the story progresses.

Ivanna Sakhno as Vinca and Billy Gunnion, who portrays Thomas at 18.

COMPLEX DRAMA: Ioan Gruffudd as Thomas and Shemss Audat as Manon in The Reunion.

"It's incredibly complex psychologically and has a very contemporary feeling in terms of the themes of lies, truth, deception and obsessional love. What's not to love about it?"

We hear more from Gruffudd about starring in The Reunion and why he wanted to be a part of the series:

WHAT MOTIVATES THOMAS TO RETURN TO FRANCE?

The reason he did come back, against his better judgment, is because he's obsessed with the girl he was in love with back in the early '90s at the International School – namely Vinca Rockwell.

She disappeared mysteriously one night and he's coming back to try to piece together that mystery but his other past has caught up with him at the same time. You've got these two narratives colliding.

WHAT MADE HIM A MUST-PLAY CHARACTER?

He's somebody who is running away from his past. He's an obsessive character and he's especially obsessed with Vinca. I think she lives on in all of the novels he's subsequently written and he can't shake her. He can't let her go.

I also think his upbringing was probably a little bit cold and distant. His parents were teachers at the school he attended and it is revealed across the six episodes that they aren't all that they seem either.

Thomas feels a bit empty inside and he's searching for some closure. He's a restless character. He's trying to escape his past and I think this is the only way he can perhaps get some finality, by going back.

He arrives on the back of a book launch. He gets this invitation and he can't help himself.

HOW DOES THE REUNION DIFFER FROM OTHER THRILLERS?

We see the characters in the past. We see them as 18-year-olds in their last years at school, and the younger actors are brilliantly cast.

They're terrific, such wonderful actors, and they help the audience understand these characters as older people and the evolution they must have gone through.

You can see the pain Thomas is in and the struggles the other characters have had trying to escape what they did back then, to better themselves and to do something good for the community.

I think they're largely successful but then Thomas comes back and reminds them of the past. His presence sets off all this intrigue and everyone's lives unravel. He has a domino effect on these people.

WAS IT A DELIGHT FILMING IN THE SOUTH OF FRANCE?

It's just as you'd imagine. The climate is wonderful, the infrastructure is terrific, you've got talent from all over France and Italy who came to either act or work on the show, and there's such a reverence towards film-making in France. It feels like being part of a very rich culture.

The French working day is very precise and specific. It's different to the American version, where you sort of work until you've finished the day and it doesn't matter if you do X amount of overtime.

In France you finish when you're supposed to finish so you have your evening and your dinner. It's very civilised. There's such a reverence towards the craft of making film and television.

WAS THE NOVEL BY GUILLAUME MUSSO NEW TO YOU?

The novel was completely new to me, although I know he's a prolific and highly successful writer.

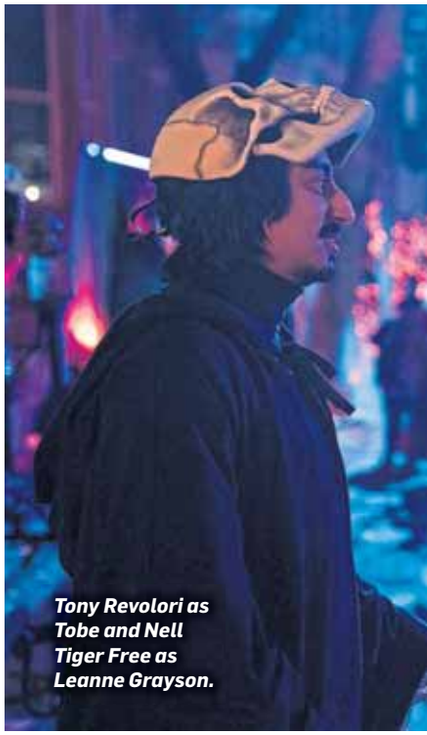
The book was very popular in France and it resonates internationally, especially for people of my age.

And the themes and the story work in any language. It's deliberately set in an international school that we all can imagine attending.

THE REUNION

PREMIERES ON ITVX ON JANUARY 12

SUPERNATURAL SUSPENSE: Darkly humorous psychological thriller Servant stars Tony Kebbell as Sean Turner, Rupert Grint as Julian Pearce and Nell Tiger Free as Leanne Grayson.



Tony Revolori as Tobe and Nell Tiger Free as Leanne Grayson.

Servant steps up

M Night Shyamalan.

Endings are never easy, and for acclaimed director M Night Shyamalan, his latest goodbye involves "a sense of loss" but also "an even greater sense of gratitude".

He's referring to the fourth and final series of psychological thriller Servant, which airs on Apple TV+ from January 13.

The series, which has followed the journey of fictional Philadelphia couple Sean and Dorothy Turner, played by RocknRolla star Toby Kebbell and Lauren Ambrose, has chronicled the couple's grief and denial and a doll which appears to transform into a living baby (named Jericho).

A central figure is their nanny with a seemingly hidden agenda, the mysterious Leanne Grayson, played by Nell Tiger Free, with Harry Potter star Rupert Grint also starring centrally throughout as Dorothy's brother Julian Pearce.

Best known as the force behind hit films like The Sixth Sense, The Village, Lady In The Water and more, Shyamalan, 52, reflects on the final chapter, saying: "When telling a long-form story, there's always a chance you won't get to tell the ending. I'm so grateful we have this opportunity and, as we end this story, there is still so much love for the show.

"My hope is for Servant to be watched and discovered for years to come and that its darkly humorous tone, the emotion that runs through each episode and the supernatural patina will resonate with audiences for a long time."

In the fourth instalment, audiences arrive at a Dorothy recuperating from her life-changing balcony fall and an ever-growing paranoid Leanne, who is convinced the cult she has fled from, the Church of Lesser Saints, is out to try to get her back into the fold.

American actress Ambrose, 44, whose other credits include five seasons of Six Feet Under, Torchwood and the upcoming second series of Yellowjackets, says: "The physical trauma of her fall might finally jog her memory this final season in terms of what happened to her baby in the first season.

"I'm very interested to see what happens if Dorothy finally faces the reality of her grief and if this family has the courage to finally grieve."

British actress Free, 23, says Leanne's journey has been challenging but "rewarding".

She explains: "Leanne is steadfast in her decision to remain separated from this sect, boldly telling those threatening her that they can't hurt her anymore, that she's not who she used to be but that she's something more."

Executive producer and director Shyamalan adds: "There was a defiant part of her that continued to emerge, this kind of 'Don't mess with me' anger which a level

audiences will again see as the final season unfolds.

"And, like we portrayed in season three, Leanne is astonished at her ability to manifest things in the real world."

After landing early roles in films like Mr Stink, Free's other career highlights include Game Of Thrones, crime drama Endeavour and the Rufus Norris-directed 2012 film Broken.

She says of Servant: "Every season is very different from the previous one. I feel like I've played three different characters at this point and season four is no different.

"It's stepping into this new version of Leanne, who has now changed from the girl that we first met when she arrived at the Turner home at the beginning of the very first episode.

"This new Leanne, now burdened with this paranoia which continues in season four, was a challenge for me but a rewarding one as well."

Central to the storyline throughout has been Leanne and Dorothy's relationship, which Ambrose says has a dynamic which "definitely shifted from season to season".

She says: "And when we leave season three, we're in a whole other zone as viewers will see in the final season. The cracks begin to show very quickly.

"These two very strong and opinionated women again battle for the love of this child. And that confrontation, if you will, continues this season as it raises the question: Who is the woman of the house?

"Dorothy wants to help this disturbed young woman work through her problems but they turn out to be bigger than anyone in the family can handle."

There is, she adds, also the question of whether her character Dorothy will finally realise "her responsibility" for the death of her and Sean's baby Jericho.

The final series was a family affair for Shyamalan too, as his daughter Ishana helmed episodes three and seven. But Shyamalan, who led episode nine, also cast the net wide to find other directors to take the lead on other episodes.

He explains: "I keep my eye out every time I see or hear something at a film festival or watch something on television.

"Finding genre-driven female directors is important to me as well. I want a very different, off-kilter point of view and I want to celebrate that in the directors we cast to helm each episode during the entire run."

Summarising the various seasons of the show, he says adamantly: "I think season four is the best we've ever done. In my mind, we definitely took the show to a whole new level."

Unfortunately, Ricky Jnr gets plenty of attention when he gets stuck into Nugget's stolen bottle of vodka, leaving Jack so angry he lashes out at both his wife and Ravi. Will Jack later regret it when a flirty Ravi makes a move on Denise after bonding with her over the perils of parenting?

Jean bans the Slaters from throwing her a 60th birthday party as they can't afford it, but Harvey has a plan to ease their cash problems, and Lola and Jay make an announcement.

EMMERDALE: Marshall arrives at the cafe and gets into an argument with April which ends in violence.

CORONATION STREET

Damon persuades the bistro to start receiving fruit and veg from a supplier he knows. Jacob realises that's how his dad will smuggle his drugs into the area. Following a close call involving the police, Jacob suffers a beating from Damon who informs him in no uncertain terms that if he doesn't disappear immediately, Amy will be harmed.

Max could also be in trouble. He's released without charge after being questioned by police, but can't escape from Griff so easily. David interrupts a row between the pair and a fight ensues that could make the situation worse. But Spider vows to bring Griff down, despite not having recovered fully from his injuries.

Billy promises to support Summer ahead of her fertility clinic appointment, but then changes his mind after hearing something disturbing about Mike from Leanne. Plus, Daisy gains a new admirer, while Gemma, Bernie and Michael triumph over head teacher Mrs York.

EMMERDALE

Moira, Matty, Mackenzie and Amy need to keep their stories straight when they are taken in for questioning by the police – and some of them remain calmer under pressure than others.

EASTENDERS: Zack takes Chelsea's advice on board and turns down the cruise job.

When they meet up again back at Butlers Farm, they agree the stakes are getting higher, and Moira remains anxious about Caleb's involvement. However, it's when the cops bring Kyle back in for questioning that the situation takes a turn for the worse.

As if that wasn't enough to deal with, Mackenzie feels guilty when he learns Chloe was taken to hospital after collapsing. It soon wears off though when Charity and Sarah insist that Chloe comes home with them once she's discharged, leaving Mackenzie desperate to find a way to get rid of her.

April is in trouble for punching Marshall and getting a belly button piercing, prompting Rhona to accuse Naomi of being a bad influence – but it seems Rhona is no role model either when the confrontation turns physical.

Kim tells Gabby she isn't ready to take over the business, and Bernice's career plans also suffer a setback when she learns Pollard intends to sell the B&B.

HOLLYOAKS

The simmering misogyny storyline reaches boiling point with an hour-long special that coincides with Verity's funeral.

However, the week begins with Maxine being hurt to discover that although Eric is being questioned by the police, he's got James to represent him.

So, she heads to the caravan in search of more evidence, only for Eric to come back, catch her in the act and take her prisoner.

He grows increasingly unstable as he tells her he's come up with a plan to avenge Verity's death, and it involves putting more women in danger. Can Maxine escape and raise the alarm before it's too late?

Meanwhile, Charlie is unconvinced by Mason's apology, so Leah visits the Chen-Williams household to check if he really meant it – and makes a big discovery.

Warren kidnaps Sophie and Sebastian, and Matthew Jesus announces that he wants to live with Myra in Alicante because he can't cope with all the McQueens' drama.

Sadly, it could get worse when Felix tries to convince Mercedes to go on the run before she's arrested.

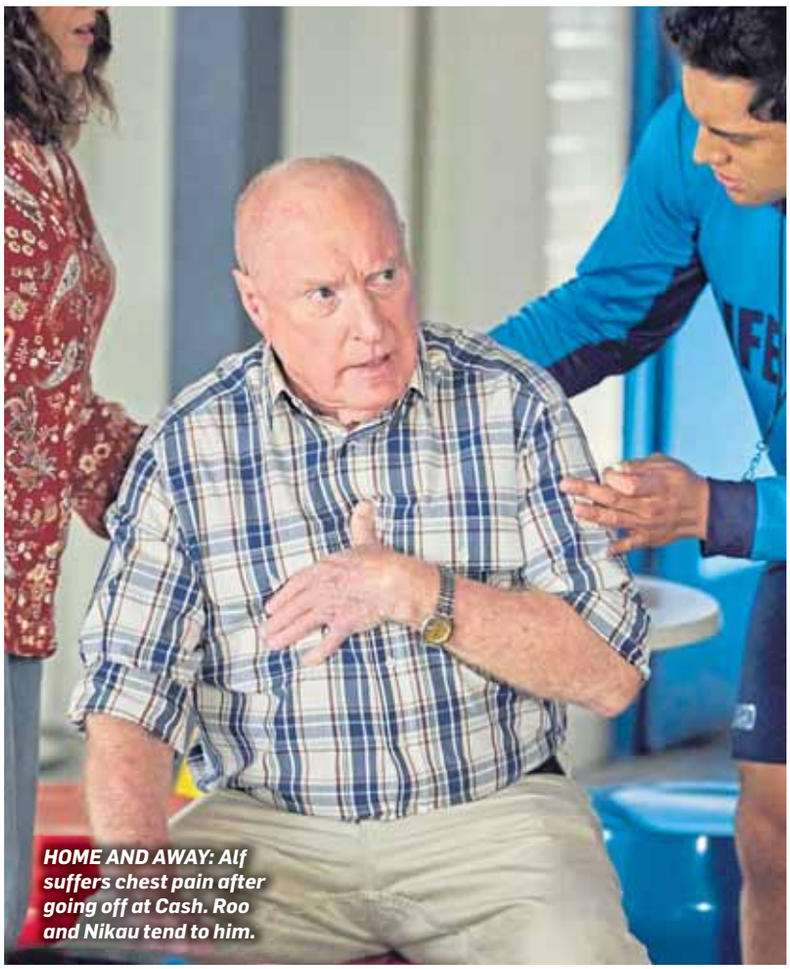
HOME AND AWAY

After its festive break, it's time to return to Summer Bay. Unfortunately, Marilyn is still AWOL. Cash knows where she is, but he's not willing to tell anybody, which upsets Alf so much, he can no longer hold back his anger.

Marilyn, meanwhile, is trying to make amends by volunteering at a youth shelter in the city. She also bumps into Roo before giving a statement to the police concerning Heather.

Back home, Felicity and Tane lock horns over wedding arrangements and Ziggy embraces life once again, although her new exuberance annoys Justin, who feels she isn't taking her responsibilities as the garage's new manager seriously enough. He then decides to cut her hours, which doesn't go down well. It's a move he may regret after he's snowed under with work.

Lyrik's music video gains some fans, Xander organises a date with Stacey, and Mackenzie thinks Remi should give up on his dream of finding happiness with Bree.



HOME AND AWAY: Alf suffers chest pain after going off at Cash. Roo and Nikau tend to him.

Troupe crime tale of revue laid bare

When Kumail Nanjiani signed up to lead a new series based on the Chippendales, his knowledge of the male dance troupe, like many of us, was limited to risque performances and a particular uniform.

"I knew it was a cultural phenomenon and had seen it (parodied by Patrick Swayze) as part of a Saturday Night Live sketch," says The Big Sick actor, 44. "I knew it was cuffs, collars and bow ties, but I had no idea of the backstory, that it was so wild and full of crime."

It's a narrative unbeknownst to many – yet it's one that Disney+ is set to explore in its latest biographical drama, Welcome To Chippendales.

Created by Robert Siegel and inspired by the 2014 book Deadly Dance: The Chippendales Murders by K Scot Macdonald and Patrick MonstesDeOca, the eight-part miniseries – dubbed a sprawling true-crime saga – details the darkly comedic, crime-ridden story behind the male revue.

Specifically, it tells the story of Somen "Steve" Banerjee, an Indian immigrant who became the unlikely founder of the stripping empire – and let nothing stand in his way in the process.

For Pakistan-born Nanjiani, who has become synonymous with such comic roles as Dinesh in the HBO hit Silicone Valley, playing Banerjee was a chance to flex a different muscle entirely. His portrayal follows the character as he navigates the ups and downs of business – from first having purchased failing LA bar Destiny II to establishing the exotic Chippendales in 1979 for a thrilled female audience.

But while he worked to transform his failing club into a lucrative enterprise, the sold-out dance tours, VHS tapes and merchandise lines were underpinned by sex, drugs, and murder.

"I'd never gotten the opportunity to play someone like him before; someone who does have so much darkness and then doesn't reckon with it," Nanjiani says of landing the role.

"So for me, it was about looking at the eight episodes and finding tiny little steps that I could take so that it was the same guy at the beginning, who you wouldn't imagine doing this stuff, as at the end, when it now makes perfect sense that he would do this stuff.

"He's consistent as a human being the entire time, so that was very exciting."

However, the lack of overt comedy and the "emotional work" required was certainly a challenge, he says, explaining: "It wasn't as much getting into the emotions, but sometimes it was about how to get out of it after a scene.

"But Emma Thompson once said, 'When you go on stage, you start your job. And then when it's over, you walk off and then you're done'. And so to me, having that attitude to it was very important because I didn't want to take any of that stuff home with me."

Were there also conversations had about the way in which the series confronts themes of racism, sexism and sexual exploitation?

"It deals with racism in a way that I find very nuanced," Nanjiani notes. "I don't think any of these things we can have any answers about – all you can do is ask the questions and show the world as it is.

"And I think this show does that and it explores, for me, racism in a way that I have never seen explored before in American pop culture."

For example, he elaborates: "I think it's interesting that we see Steve being the victim of racism and then also the perpetrator of racism – race dynamics are complicated like that.

"You like to think that people who have traditionally been marginalised would have more empathy for other groups that have been marginalised, but that's kind of not the case.

"People who are bullied will turn around and bully other people. And I hadn't really seen that very much.

"Usually when you see racism happen in pop culture, it's got a very specific perspective, but it was interesting here to have minorities bumping up against each other in that way. I know it's going to be provocative."

"There's also a duty, when you do a period piece, to help the audience reflect on what was wrong and right in that period of time," adds his co-star Annaleigh Ashford, who plays his wife Irene. "And if you're looking back on that era you lived in, how you could have done better."

"Another thematic strand in this is we look back at the Chippendales' emergence and it is sort of connected to the women's liberation movement – it was the first time in the history of mankind where men were not just watching women take off clothes, the tables were turned," says the Masters Of Sex actor, 37. "But it was still being run by men – and it was also an accident. Nobody got into this saying, 'We need to liberate women and their sexuality'. It was like, 'Oh we can make money off of this'.

"So I found my character was an

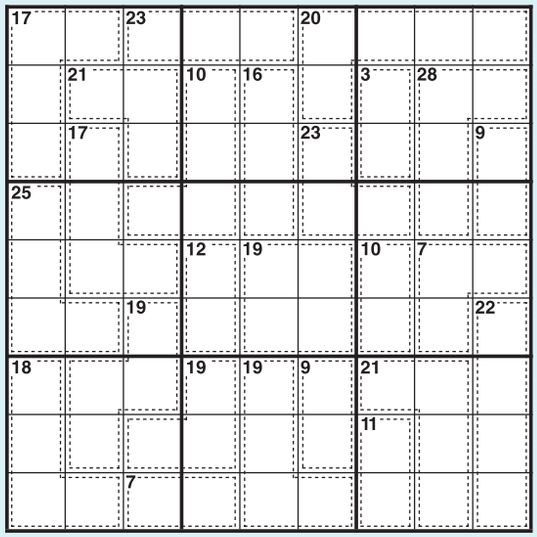
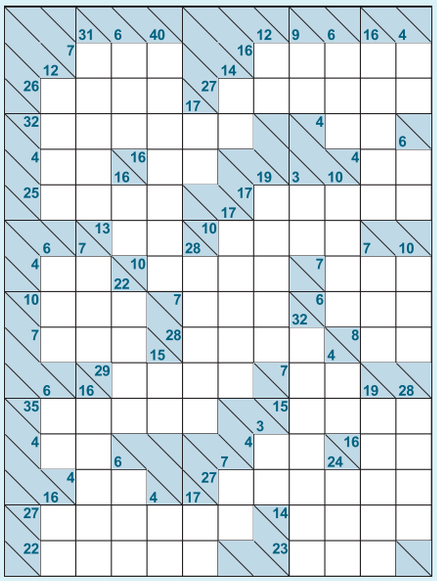
KILLER SUDOKU

Just like conventional Sudoku the aim is to fill each row, each column and each 3x3 box with all the numbers from 1 to 9. Your clues are the numbers in the dotted-line shapes, which represent the sum of the numbers within that shape. The same number cannot be used twice within a dotted-line shape.



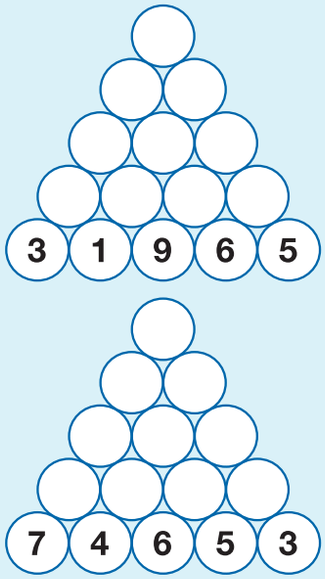
KAKURO

Fill in the grid so that each block adds up to the total in the box above or to the left of it. You can only use the digits 1-9 and you must not use the same digit twice in a block. The same digit may occur more than once in a row or column.



ADD UP

If the number in each circle is the sum of the two below it, how quickly can you figure out the top number? Try this one in your head, before writing anything down.



WORDSEARCH

The listed things to do with camping can all be found in the grid. Words may run either forwards or backwards, in a horizontal, vertical or diagonal direction, but always in a straight, unbroken line.

EMPIRE BUILDER: Kumail Nanjiani stars in Welcome To Chippendales as Somen 'Steve' Banerjee, the Indian immigrant to the US who became the unlikely founder of the male revue act.

interesting window into how the women who were a part of this business were not only treated, but also the way that they had to get in, which was through men."

Joining Nanjiani and Ashford in the ensemble cast are Murray Bartlett as fast-talking New Yorker and producer-choreographer Nick De Noia, and Juliette Lewis as no-nonsense Denise, who goes from Chippendales groupie to loyal right-hand consigliere to Nick.

Recurring guest stars include Quentin Plair, who plays Otis, the sole black dancer at the Chippendales' LA outpost; Robin de Jesus as Ray, a proud Nuyorican from the Bronx and the Chippendales resident handyman; Nicola Peltz Beckham as Dorothy, a key player in the founding of the Chippendales; and Dan Stevens who plays her schmoozer husband Paul.

"It's going to be fun to shed a light on Chippendales in this beautifully dynamic, quirky, love-filled, heart-filled show. It's got a lot going on," remarks Ashford.

Do the cast find it surprising that the Chippendales still live on today through tours and in Las Vegas?

"It doesn't surprise me because it's America," de Jesus, 38, answers. "Like the fact that things can play out the way they did, and there's still a business going, that sounds about right to me!

"I think what's more surprising to me is that we don't have more of it, in a world where women are allowed to be more and more in their power.

"I'm surprised that we don't have other versions of Chippendales for women to go to see and have a good night out. Because, you know, we all got needs."

The John Bishop Show
(STV, 9.30pm-10.15pm)

Between Christmas and New Year, viewers were treated to the Liverpudlian comedian's End of the Year Show, in which he poked fun at the events of the previous 12 months, with help from Beth Mead and Ian McKellen. Now Bishop is back with a new regular run of his programme, a mix of topical stand-up routines and interviews with familiar faces from the worlds of sport, film, TV and music. "I was delighted with the response to the first series," says the former Doctor Who star. "It was great to give viewers a Saturday night show that offered an entertaining mix of comedy, interesting guests and topical discussion."

That's My Jam
(BBC1, 8pm-9pm)

Mo Gilligan hosts the music game show. Becky Hill and Jason Derulo take on Salt-N-Pepa as they face some super-sized musical challenges, pushing their singing abilities, performance skills and musical knowledge to the limit as they compete to be declared this week's That's My Jam champions.

Ant & Dec's Limitless Win
(STV, 8.30pm-9.30pm)

Jimmy Carr and Katherine Ryan continue their climb up the ladder. Then the hosts welcome Geordie best friends Helen and Kelly, who think they have what it takes to conquer the Limitless Ladder and change their lives forever – how high will they really go?

Write Around the World with Richard E Grant
(BBC4, 8pm-9pm)

The actor's literary journey takes him to Andalucia in southern Spain. He finds out about the ancient city of Granada, helped by the writings of poet and playwright Federico Garcia Lorca, visits the mountain town of Ronda, and follows Laurie Lee's footsteps from his travelogue.

Escape to the Chateau
(More4, 6.55pm-8pm)

Dick Strawbridge and Angel Adoree prepare to open their home for wedding season after two years. Work continues on giving the 150-year-old exterior walls a 21st-century new look, while Dick and Angel have a job to do in the room that was once the chateau's cider and vinegar store.

TELEVISION

THE BEST OF TODAY'S TELLY

CRITIC'S CHOICE

The Great Pottery Throw Down
(Channel 4, 7.45pm-9pm)

Hopefully Siobhan McSweeney will remain fit enough to present the entire series this year – in 2022 she broke her leg and had to be replaced for most of the run by Ellie Taylor. Also back in action are the judges – Rich Miller and Keith Brymer Jones; the latter is pretty much guaranteed to break down in tears during every episode, which is oddly entertaining. They'll be offering their opinions on the birthday tea sets and handleless milk jugs made by the latest batch of 12 amateur potters.

His Dark Materials
(BBC1, 7pm-8pm)

Lyra and Will journey through the Suburbs of the Dead and reach a seemingly infinite bureaucratic space - but she is forced to make a devastating choice if she wants to find Roger. Mrs Coulter arrives at the Magisterium and tries to convince MacPhail of her allegiance in order to save Lyra.

Happy Valley
(BBC1, 9pm-10pm)

When Catherine discovers the remains of a gangland murder victim in a drained reservoir, it sparks a chain of events that bizarrely leads her straight back to Tommy Lee Royce. Crime drama, starring Sarah Lancashire, James Norton, Siobhan Finneran, Charlie Murphy and Derek Riddell.

Shakespeare in Italy with Francesco da Mosto
(BBC4, 10.35pm-11.35pm)

Part one of two. The architect and historian reveals how the Mediterranean country influenced the Bard, as he takes a journey of discovery through Shakespeare's Italian-based plays. He visits the locations that inspired the playwright, beginning with Padua.

Emergency Helicopter Medics
(More4, 8pm-9pm)

A car accident in Cumbria leaves Richard fighting for his life. In Hampshire, horse rider Pat takes a nasty fall when her animal is spooked. Plus, in a night mission in Suffolk, the medics race to the aid of motorcyclist Nigel who has suffered serious multiple injuries.

EWAN CAMERON REVIEWS THIS WEEK'S TELLY

AGE ISSUE A DISTRACTION

Martin Compston was fine in Mayflies (BBC1) but he was too young to play a 50-something.

His character, Jimmy, was supposed to have been 17 or 18 in 1986 – a bit of a stretch for the 38-year-old actor.

To compound matters, 53-year-old co-star Tony Curran, who played Jimmy's childhood friend Tully, IS the right age, but seeing them side-by-side on screen made them look more like father and son than best pals.

A solution would have been to set the adaptation of Andrew O'Hagen's novel a decade ago – but then Curran would have looked too old for the part.

As good as the drama was, I was distracted throughout by the fact Compston was a toddler when the events took place.

A RUDDERLESS PIRATE SHOW

Anyone hoping that Taika Waititi's Our Flag Means Death (BBC2) will do for pirates what What We Do In The Shadows did for vampires – that's an overly complicated sentence – may well be disappointed.

The historic spoof, which stars Flight of the Conchords' Rhys Darby as a soft-spoken pirate captain, has a few moments of inspired silliness but the rest feels adrift – a show without a rudder.

Beyond belief

RETELLING OF JOHN STONEHOUSE SAGA LEANS INTO THE LUDICROUSNESS OF STORY

The plot of Stonehouse (ITV) was so ridiculous, I needed to resist the temptation to break out Google in order to fact-check the most ludicrous bits.

Remarkably, or embarrassingly, it was all true.

MP John Stonehouse really did get recruited by the Czech secret service in the early 70s and became perhaps the most inept spy in British espionage history...

And he also really did swim out to sea off the coast of Miami in a pretty hopeless attempt to fake his own death.

And the crime really did get discovered when police in Australia – where he was living under a fake name he'd stolen from a dead constituent – turned up at his door looking for, of all people, Lord Lucan.

From the opening animated credits and jaunty Henry Mancini-inspired score, which draw comparisons to movie capers like Catch Me If You Can and the Pink Panther, you can tell that director Jon S Baird's three-parter is leaning into the ludicrousness of the story.

If you're looking for a deep-dive into the human impact of Stonehouse's crimes, this is not the show for you.

Matthew Macfadyen plays Stonehouse as a bumbling imbecile and with his tongue so firmly planted in cheek I'm surprised he could get his dialogue out.

Macfadyen's real-life wife Keeley Hawes plays the MP's long-suffering wife Barbara, who can see right through her duplicitous husband's lies from the start and gets some of the snarkiest dialogue of the entire series.

Stonehouse, along with the recent TV dramatisations of the Jeremy Thorpe affair and Duke and Duchess of Argyll divorce case, shows there's a real appetite for revisiting scandals of the past – rightly or wrongly.

While I'm not sure the surviving relatives in these cases would necessarily approve of the frequently comic way the stories are told, they do make for undeniably juicy television.

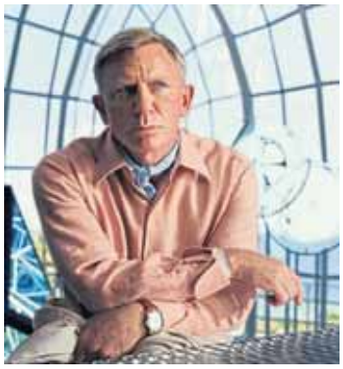
VALLEY FINALE MASTERFUL

The pressure on Sally Wainwright to craft a fitting conclusion to arguably British television's greatest crime drama must be immense, but she makes it look effortless in Happy Valley (BBC1).

Although previous series of Happy Valley have gone to some shocking and violent places, Wainwright is not from the Line of Duty school of crime writing.

While that blockbuster show relies on left-field twists to carry the viewer along, Happy Valley's superpower is Wainwright's innate ability to craft plotlines and characters that don't stretch credulity.

She wants us to care about them all, so that when things turn sour – and they will – the violence has consequences and isn't there just to shock.



Ewan's movie of the week

GLASS ONION
NETFLIX

Netflix's answer to Hercule Poirot returns in this sun-drenched sequel to 2019's Knives Out.

When an acquaintance of tech billionaire Miles Bron (Edward Norton) is murdered on a Greek island, famed detective Benoit Blanc (Daniel Craig) swings into action and must decide who, out of the motley crew of prime suspects, dunnit.

The success or failure of these Agatha Christie-inspired murder mysteries depends on how far they can stay ahead of the viewer – and to that end Glass Onion is mostly successful.

If I had a quibble it's that when the big reveal finally arrives, it's perhaps a tad predictable. That said, it's so much fun hanging out with the star-studded cast I didn't really mind.

If writer-director Rian Johnson and Daniel Craig want to keep making these films into their old age, I'm ok with that.
